

Demonstration Projects

Sometimes your objectives are too far-reaching for a kaizen to handle them, yet you still want your results achieved using lean thinking. A Demonstration Project is an excellent method to follow the same fundamental structure of a kaizen, but absorb a much greater task. Whether you are laying out an entire plant (greenfield or brownfield), launching a new service or tackling a merger, these major events can either bring you to the next level or halt you in your tracks. Executed effectively, Demonstration Projects can yield significant results.

Our lean coach can either be a project leader or can co-lead with your internal personnel. In either case, he will expertly guide your project teams through each step of our 9-Step Demonstration Project process, helping you build skill, change the culture and achieve big gains.
